Stroll into the Country Road

Masaru Endo Mengmeng Du

Hear from our experience!!

Chippubetsu is a beautiful small town located in western Hokkaido, where visitors are invited to enjoy the tranquility and slow pace of life in Japan's countryside.

Taking a morning jog in splendid landscape, joining hospitable farmers to harvest and taste fresh vegetables in folksy styles really sounds like a good idea. Some local youths also fly their own unmanned helicopter for crop protection instead of using conventional tractors: the so-called smart agriculture, if you are lucky you would witness this kind of thrilling and cutting edge sport on spot.

The most unique scenery here in Chippubetsu town is that visitors are very likely to run into farmers harvesting broccolis bathing in genial breeze in the morning, as broccoli is widely planted at a large scale and many local delicious dishes as well as snacks are made from broccoli flour.

Lecture on Hokkaido Dialect

Hokkaido remains an independent island from "mainland Japan" in history. There are many interesting phrases in Hokkaido dialect that sound very different from standard Japanese. For instance, "Kowai" in standard Japanese means "scary, terrible", however, in Hokkaido dialect it really means "tired, exhausted".

What's Chippubetsu like?

Chippubetsu town was founded in Meiji 28/29(1895-96) by soldiers turned farmer- and their families with the aim of protecting and developing northern Japan.

These families went where few people had tread, cutting paths through forests and cultivating swamps into farmland. With a resilient pioneering spirit, they endeavored to gradually build up a nature-conserving agricultural county.

When this era of land cultivation began, the Tonden Bell was how farmer kept time.

Later the centennial memorial tower, which commemorates the founding of the town was built including a new western style bell that replaced the Tonden bell.

The bell strikes four times a day as a symbol of the town.

Bell chime times:

6 o'clock, 12 o'clock, 18 o'clock, and 21 o'clock.
